

The Right Equality of Feminism in the Society

Biswajit Majumdar

Former Student, Department of English, Chhatrapati Shahu Ji Maharaj University

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.70798/tgjct/010400041>

Abstract

Women past through many problems, obstacles and barriers to become an important member in the society. In the past, women did not have any kind of right she was isolated neglected and mistreated by man. By the coming on feminism the profile and the image woman have changed completely and form being a poppet in the hands of man. She becomes a queen, president, artist, and the teacher etc.

This research paper examines the wishes, dreams and the ability of women to change her position in the duties. This research produces a number of key findings; recent research and statistics the confirm a significant development of women participation in different fields such as economic growth, culture up heavals in addition to the political and social structures.

The main conclusion drawn from this research is that the feminist efforts where efficient in many ways in which they brought a huge change in the position and the role of women. They were to remove the majority if not all the stereotypical pictures and to give her more importance in the society by giving her the political social and economical rights.

Keywords: Feminism, Women Right, Female Movement, Gender Liberation, Patriarchy

Introduction

Feminism is a range of social movements, political movements, and ideologies the share common goal; to define, established, and achieve the political economic personal and include fighting gender stereotypes and seeking to establish, educational and professional opportunities for women that are equal to those for men.

Feminism movement have campaigned and continue to campaign for women srights, including the right to vote, to hold public office, to work to earn hair waves, equal pay and eliminate the gender gap, to own property, to receive education to enter contracts, to have equal rise within marriage and to have maternity leave. Feminist have also work to ensure access to legal abortions and social integration and to protect women and girls from rape, sexual harassment and domestic violence. Changes in dress and acceptable physical activity have often been part of feminist movements.

After a long suffering and discrimination of women to find limited recognized place in the society. She is now a days playing an important role in society as a politician, socialist and economist. This achievement emerged by the coming of feminism wheat granted women rights.

Feminism is an ideology that demands and equal right of main and women in terms of politics, decision making, career, and having children. It consists of a number of social, cultural and political movements that take attempts for equal rights of men and women (Asnani, 2020). It is considered as a struggle to achieve same rights, opportunities and dignity as a man have in the society (Raj & Davidson, 2014). It has raised much in the Western upper- class society and the women have fought for women's surface and reproductive rights (Agger, 1998). The rise of feminism in Europe occurred as "women of all classes become increasingly aware of the way in which their sex influenced their life chances and experiences" (Fuchs & Thompson, 2005). It endeavors to see an end to the dominance of man over woman, and to provide equal rights between women and men in all fields ranging from household issues to politics (Kuleli, 2019).

Different discipline, such as sociology, philosophy, economics and politics, served as distinctive intellectual backgrounds of feminism (Herouach, 2019).

Review of literature

Shruti Jain has observed the digital revolution has paved the way for a new iteration of feminism. She has believed that the digital space can become a breeding ground for sexism and misogyny. See also highlight the strengths and deficit of contemporary cyber feminism through postcolonial and postmodern feminist theories (Jain, 2020).

Nyoman Kutha Ratna has realized that feminism is it tool for women to fight for the rights, which is closely related to racial conflicts between weaker groups and stronger groups (Ratna, 2004).

Sofian Herouach has investigated students "attitude towards the social status of Moroccan women. He has realized that feminism, female activism and international human rights may influence the cases of women's liberation. But some factors such as religion, patriarchy (an idea about sex differences that institutionalize smale dominance throughout is society).

Objective of The Study

1. To eliminate the women oppression from all nations, and
2. To establish gender equality in the society.
3. Was feminism efficient to change women's life?

Methodology of The Study

To succeed the propose study the descriptive, evaluative as well as comparative methods will be used and has been critically analysed as per the necessity of the study. The study also plans to use existing data of the issue involved mainly from secondary sources. After getting the data from secondary sources like books, Wikipedia, encyclopedia journal internet etc; a critical analysis has been made on the issues.

Result and Discussion

After a long trip no making the world battery by making new rules, inventing new things changing ideas and thoughts. Women were still struggling every moment and they were still looking for their rights. Feminism has generated as ongoing debate in all over the world and it came to solve women's problems and to put on end to the injustice treatment from them. It was the voice of women in time's they were not able to speak or to express their feelings and wishes.

This research paper deals with the general definition of feminism in addition to some important concepts related to it like types. Different waves and how does this idea grow through time. It gives also an over view of Muslim and black feminism.

Definition of Feminism

Many researchers and scholars use the term feminism and they tried to define and explain it differently. Sum of them use it to refer to some historical political movements in USA and EUROPE. Whereas, orders refers it to that belief that women live an injustice life with no rights and no equality Zara HudaFaris explained this idea, as... "Women need feminism because there are women who suffer in justice...."

The term 'feminism' has a long history it is represents women's problems and suffering in addition to their dreams in equal opportunities in societies controlled by men, his power, rules, wishes and orders. Lara Huda Faris added also "... Women have traditionally been dehumanized by a male dominant society, which they call patriarchy and that has been always better to be a man....."

The term feminism has a history in English linked with women's activism from the late 19th century to the present, it is useful to distinguish feminist ideas or beliefs from feminist politician movement, for even in periods where there has been no significant political activism around woman's subordination, individuals have been concerned with and theories about justice for women.

Despite of the painful segregation and the hard inequality, women wear able to stand up each time and they were able to speak and express their problems, feelings and the wishes. in addition women were able to spread it in all over the world, make it a symbol of equality, and make all people believe that men and women deserve equality in all opportunities treatment and social rights.

Many forms of Feminism

Several subtypes of feminism ideology have developed over the years; some of the major subtypes are listed as follows:

Liberal Feminism

Liberal feminism asserts the quality of men and women through political and legal reform. It is an individualistic form of feminism and feminist theory which focus on women's ability to so and maintain their equality through their own action and choices. Liberal feminism looks at the person on interaction between men and women as a starting ground it from which to introduce gender equity. According to liberal feminist all women are capable of asserting they are ability to achieve equality. Therefore it is possible for change to come about without altering the structure of society. Issues important to liberal feminist include reproductive and abortion, equal pay for equal worth affordable healthcare and bringing to light the frequency of sexual and domestic violence against women.

Radical feminism

Radical feminist suggests changes suggest findings technology that will allow babies to be grown outside of a women's body, to promote more equality between men and women. This will allow women to avoid missing work for maternity leave, which radical few minutes argue each one reason women aren't promoted at quickly as men. In fact, radical feminists would argue that the entire traditional family system is sexist. Men are expected to work outside the home while women are expected to care for children and clean the house. Radical feminist note that the traditional dichotomy maintains men as economically in power over women and therefore the traditional family structure should be rejected.

Socialist Feminism

Socialist feminist is slightly less extreme but still calls for major social change. Socialist feminism is a movement that calls for an end to capitalism through socialist reformation of our economy basically economy. Basically, socialist feminism argues that capitalism strengthens and support the sexiest status quo because man and the ones to currently have power and money. Those men are more willing to share their power and money with other men, which means that women are continually giving fewer opportunities and resources. This keeps women under the control of men.

Cultural Feminism

Cultural feminism emphasizes essential difference between men and women in terms of biology, personality and behavior. Women are seen to have different and superior virtues that provide the foundation for day shared identity, solidarity and sisterhood since by nature women are viewed as kinder and gently than men it follows that if women wear in power the world would be a better place. In the 1960s and 70s, some women supported the idea of forming separate women only culture.

Eco- Feminism

This form of feminism views patriarchy and its focus on control and domination not only as a source of women's oppression but has been harmful to humanity as well as destructive of living creatures and the earth itself. If combining a more comprehensive analysis of power often with a general spiritual mission Eco feminists see women's rights and empowerment linked to political, economic, social and cultural factors that benefit all living creatures and mother nature herself.

Waves of Feminism

People usually wonder about how feminism was able to pave the way for women in the entire world to become an important creature after painful rapping, killing and suffering for ages. The history of feminism movements passed through many activities or as they were called the three feminism waves. The first wave feminism occurring in the 19th and early 20th century, was mainly concerned with women's right to vote. The second wave, at its height in the 1960's and the 1970's refers to the women's liberation movement for equal legal and social right. The third wave, beginning in the 1990s, refers to a continuation of, and a reaction to second wave feminism.

The first wave of Feminism

First wave of Feminism promoted equal contact and property rights for women, opposing ownership of married women by their husbands. By the late 19th century, feminism activism was primarily focused on the rights to vote. American first wave feminism ended with passage of the 19th Amendment to the US constitution in 1919, granting women rights.

The second wave of Feminism

The second wave of Feminism of the 1960's-1980's focused on issues of equality and discrimination. The second wave slogan, 'the personal is political', identified women's cultural and political inequalities as inextricably linked and encouraged women to understand how their personal lives reflected sexist power structures. Betty Friedan and was a key player in second- wave Feminism. In 1963, her book The Feminine Mystique criticized the idea that women could find fulfillment only through childrearing and homemaking. According to Friedan's and New York times obituary, her book "ignited the contemporary women's movement in 1963 and as a result permanently transformed the social fabric of the United States and countries around the world "and is widely regarded as one of the most influential nonfiction books of the 20th century. Friedan hypothesizes that women are victims of false beliefs requiring them to find identity in their lives through husband and children. This causes women to lose their own identities in that of their family.

The third wave of Feminism

Third wave of feminism began in the early 1990s, responding to perceived failures of the second wave and to the backlash against second wave initiatives. This ideology seeks to challenge the definition of femininity that grew out of the ideas of the second wave, arguing that the second wave over-emphasized experiences of upper middle-class white women. The third wave sees women's life and intersectional, demonstrating how race, ethnicity, class, religion and nationality are all significant factors when discussing feminism. It examines issues related to women's lives on an international basis.

Example of Feminism

- Black feminism: Black feminism argues that sexism and racism are inextricable from one another forms of feminism that to overcome sexism and class oppression but ignore race can discriminate against many people, including women, through racial bias. Black feminists argue that the liberation of black women entails freedom for all people since it would require the end of racism, sexism and class oppression. One of the theories that evolved out of this movement was Alice Waker's swomanism it emerged after the early feminist moments that were led specifically by white women who advocated social changes such as women's suffrage. These movements were largely a white middle- class movements and ignored oppression based on racism and classism. Alice walker and other Romanists pointed out the black women experienced and more intense kind of oppression from that of white women.

- Muslim feminism: Muslim believe that justice and equality are intrinsic values and cardinal principles in Islam. Human beings are equal whether they are black or white, man or woman. This idea of equality between sexes emerged in Muslim societies by the coming of Islam centuries before, but a Muslim extremist was always trying to remove the right given by good to women and makes her a servant or less. By the end of the 19th century and being of 20th century people started to think differently by forming new ideology organization and departments of women's, most of the time called 'Islam feminism' or 'Arab feminism' scholars and researchers were always studying and discussing issues and stories of women's in the Quran. Which contents principles of gender equality and wider issue social justice, thus laying grounds for challenging patriarchal traditions done by those researches.

Conclusion

During a long period in history, women was not considerate as equal citizens, they suffered from bad treatments, discrimination and racism under main domination and rules. A woman in the past was living unequal and unfair life. She was prevented from doing any political, social and economic activities and her only jobs is being a housewife who takes care of home and children. At that time, women were under the control of man who dominants all the fields in which he represents the symbol of power. After all those problems, suffering and misery women in the entire world started to find ways to improve herself and to change her position in life. They tired also to join their efforts dreams, and wishes to from a universal idea that speaks about all women in any place in the world this leads to the appearance of feminism.

All the feminisms "basic slogan is creation of a just society, the protection of freedom and liberty, the creation of a class- less society, and the creation of gender- neutral society respectively. At present, education equality is accepted in many nations and female have gained many societal responsibilities worldwide. But they have not gained same advantages globally as like males to play vital role in the courts and public administration. We hope that in near future the justice, freedom, liberty and gender equality will be established in all societies.

References

- Abbasi, M. L. (2015). Marxist feminism in The Temple of My Familiar, Meridian, and The Color Purple. (Doctoral dissertation, National University of Modern Languages, Islamabad).
- Adowo, L., Gikonyo, L., Kudu, R., & Olga, M. (2011). History of feminism in Kenya. Spanish Agency for International Development Cooperation (AECID).
- Agarwal, B. (2007). The gender and environment debate: Lessons from India. In M. Rangarajan (Ed.), Environmental issues in India: A reader. New Delhi: Pearson India.
- Agger, B. (1998). Critical social theories: An introduction. Boulder, CO: Westview Press.
- Alcoff, L. M. (1988). Cultural feminism versus post-structuralism: The identity crisis in feminist theory. Signs: Journal of Women in Culture and Society, 13(3), 405–436.
- Alcoff, L. M. (1997). The politics of postmodern feminism, revisited. Cultural Critique, (36), 5–27.
- Alterman, E. (2008). Why we're liberals: A political handbook for post-Bush America. New York: Viking Adult.
- Amaefula, R. C. (2012). African feminism: Paradigms, problems, and prospects. Feminism(s), (37), 289–305.
- Anderson, B. S., & Zinsser, J. P. (2018). A history of their own: Women in Europe from prehistory to the present. New York: Oxford University Press.